Rethinking Internationalization of Research in an Increasingly Complex World

Andreas Göthenberg, STINT

Tommy Shih, STINT

Sylvia Schwaag Serger, Lund University

Jason Lane, University at Albany, SUNY

Changes in the global research landscape

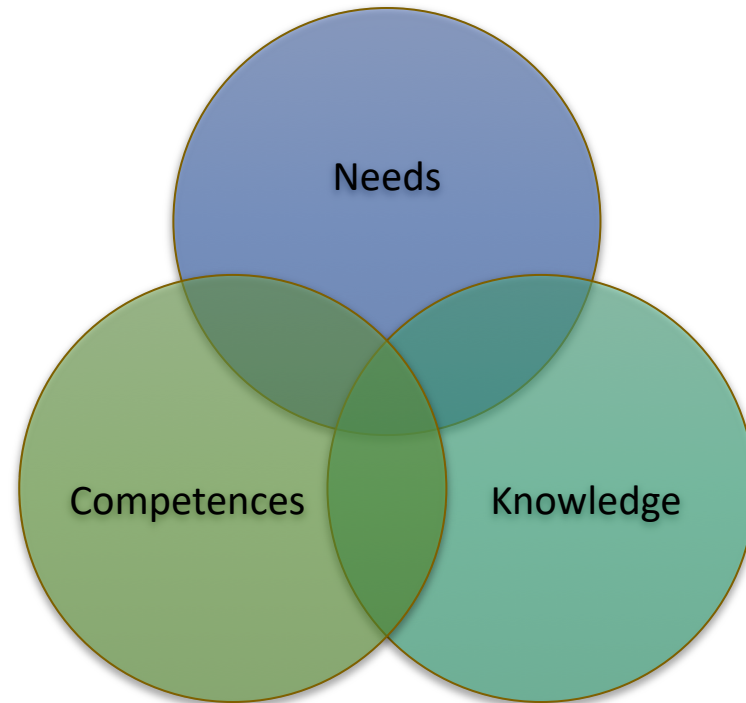

- Globalization, changing power structures, populism and nationalism
- At the same time, global challenges are growing increasingly larger and collaboration across border even more important
- A clear trend is that countries that traditionally have not been known for high quality research are advancing
- Swedish HEIs collaborating with a larger number of countries
- Today we need to relate to larger portfolio of goals and conditions

Working with guidelines for responsible internationalization

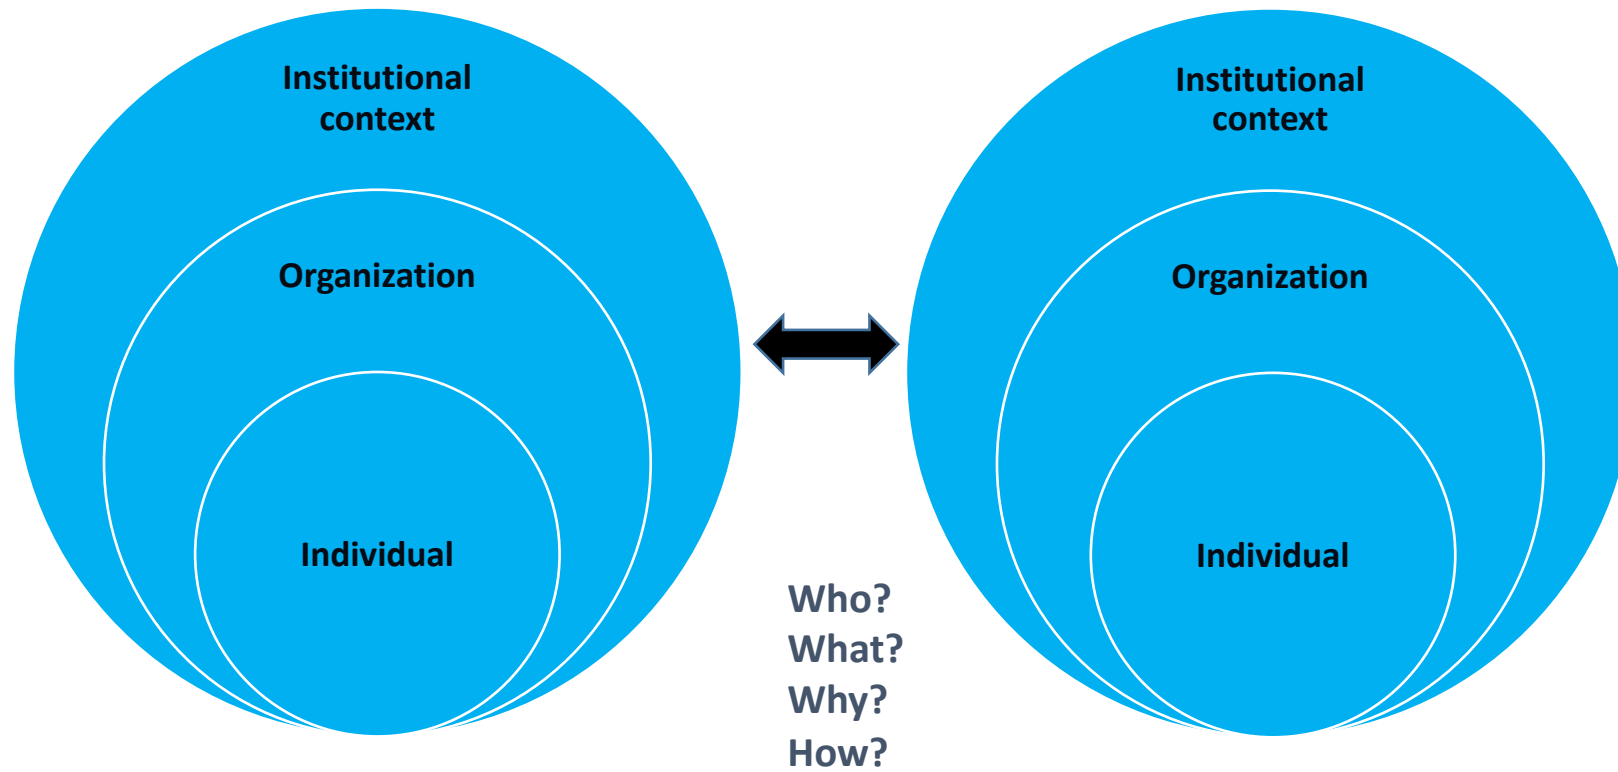

- Broader and more complex goal portfolio to consider
  - Global challenges that require international collaboration
  - Increased friction in the world
- Work across sectors and border essential to improve conditions conducive to solve problems
- Build networks and shared understanding around certain issues pertinent to collaboration
  - Knowledge
  - Leadership

The process

- Research based
- Questions:
  - What are the needs of the HEIs?
  - How do past/present collaborations look like?
  - How can the HEIs work meaningfully work with internationalization in the future?
- Over 200 interviews, reference groups
- Bibliometrics and the follow-up of the STINT's mobility programs
- Close collaboration with HEIs, funding organizations and, government agencies
