In response to our request for examples on the three topics below, your AIEA colleagues offered the following resources: (I have intentionally left out the significant number of people who lamented little or no progress on any of these three fronts.) Thanks to everyone who took the time to respond with this important information.

ACCREDITATION QEP FOCUS ON INTERNATIONALIZATION

Kennesaw State: <http://www.kennesaw.edu/globallearning.shtml> (via Gil Latz—UIPUI)

Texas Christian University (TCU) is preparing for our SACS accreditation visit this March 2013. As part of the SACS requirement, TCU will present a Quality Enhancement Project (QEP) to SACS for approval. After an internal selection process, our proposal called Global Citizenship 2020 was selected as the QEP. Assuming this will meet SACS requirements we will embark upon Global Citizenship 2020 June 1, 2013. We are very pleased that TCU will place emphasis upon comprehensive internationalization for the next five years as part of the QEP. While there are many aspects to Global Citizenship 2020 (and many people involved), the overall purpose of Global Citizenship 2020 is to require a sustained international experience (of various scope and scale) for every TCU graduate. Various paths and activities will define sustained international experience. The class of 2020 will be the first class of graduates who will complete this program. (via Jane Kucko, Director Center for International Studies, TCU)

Appalachian State is currently going through the reaccreditation process and global learning is the focus of our QEP. You can read more about it from our website at: <http://qep.appstate.edu/>. (via Jesse Lutabingwa)

Princeton will be undergoing accreditation review this year and the review's primary focus will be internationalization. I am serving on that committee, which is headed up by a faculty member in German and the Associate Dean of the College (via Diana Davies)

HR Postings Specifying International Experience/Demonstrated Commitment

Juniata College is currently undergoing a presidential search (as well as our next Middle States decennial review, incidentally). Winning the NAFSA Simon award in this past spring was good timing, as it coincided with the presidential search committee crafting the job profile <http://www.juniata.edu/president/search/>, in which internationalism figures prominently; one of 11 qualities the candidate should possess is: "Global perspective. In keeping with Juniata's mission and vision, the president must bring international experience and a global perspective to the College's decision-making processes." (via Jennifer Cushman)

Appalachian State: When we were recruiting for our current Provost, there was an emphasis on international knowledge and support. We are currently recruiting a Vice Provost for Undergraduate Education, and international experience is one of the criteria. I am also serving on the search committee. (via Jesse Lutabingwa).

University of Florida: The position description for the presidency is currently being crafted. International Affairs has submitted substantial content for this document. Watch for a fall release of this document. (via David Sammons)

Dickinson College: Presidential search requires commitment to advancing CIZN.
