

Guiding Questions: Graduate Students

As students, you are the centerpiece of campus, curriculum internationalization, and innovation because you drive your campus' academic, intercultural, and research programs. Your university would not exist without you. As students, you come from different backgrounds (including social, ethnic, economic, linguistic, and cultural) and often need to navigate different identities throughout your enrollment. Within this framework, the Association of International Education Administrators (AIEA) seeks to capture your expectations, experiences, challenges, and perspectives—whether you are a domestic, international, undergraduate, or graduate student. We want to understand your circumstances better and would like you perhaps to help us as university leaders close any gaps in perceptions around student intercultural experiences on campus.

AIEA is a global non-profit organization supporting university leaders in international education.

Please send submissions to committee chair Dr. Funwi Ayuninjam (fayuninjam@ggc.edu).

Guiding Questions for Graduate Students

For completing this survey, AIEA will add you in a drawing for one of three $25 Amazon gift cards.

1. Tell us a little about yourself, including your current degree program and hometown (max. 75 words).
2. What was the most important reason for choosing your current degree program? (max. 100 words)
3. Internationalization looks different on each campus. What does “internationalization” mean to you? How does it manifest on your campus? (max. 100 words)
4. What has been the most transformative and rewarding international or intercultural experience for you during your current course of study? (max. 100 words)
5. What are some of the biggest challenges facing internationalization at university campuses as seen through the lens of graduate students? What solutions might you offer to these challenges? (max. 100 words)
6. What are some key ways that higher education administrators or faculty members might increase international and intercultural experiences on campuses? (max. 250 words)
7. Any additional comments?
